Aja Wine

Aja (pronounced Asia), a wine blend designed to perfectly match Asian cuisine, has been launched just in time for summer. Created by long time friends and business partners David Mulham and Mark Silcocks, the idea for the blend was borne from a shared passion for good wine and delicious Asian food, "We realised that there was a true sense of confusion about which wine to choose when either dining out at a favourite Thai or Japanese restaurant, or staying in with some Indian home delivery."

With David's strong ties and experience with top wine brands in the Hunter Valley, and Mark, as an accomplished marketing expert and home chef, the two set out to create the perfect match. The result is 'Aja'.

Proving a hit with many iconic Asian restaurants such as Longrain, Rambutan, Zaffraan and Blue Ginger, which offer Aja on their wine list, Aja Blush was created next for anyone who prefers red to white. A lower alcohol, lightly sparkling Moscato blush wine, Aja Blush is deliciously refreshing with just a hint of sweetness. Aja Blush, like Aja, is all about choosing the best wine to complement Asian food.

"We researched the idea of a wine specially blended to go with Asian food, particularly amongst females and they all agreed it was a great idea. Choosing wine when they were eating in or dining out at an Asian restaurant would be so much easier if they just picked Aja, say the wine's creators, Mark Silcocks and David Mulham.

Aja and Aja Blush Recommended Retail Price is $20, and both are available in select restaurants and wine retailers such as Five Way Cellars and Balmain Village Cellars servicing recognised BYO Asian restaurants.
